A carriage rolled up the avenue. Herr von Walde frowned, and passed his hand across his eyes as if he had been rudely awakened from a dream. To a moment the door opened, and the baroness entered. She, as well as Bella, who was walking by her mother's side to-day with quite an air of grown-up dignity, had not yet laid aside her bonnet and mantle.

"I am glad to be at home again," she cried. "The air to-day is horrible. I repeated a hundred times having left the house, and shall probably atone for my maternal solicitude by a heavy cold. Bella was so anxious to see for herself how you are, dear Helene, that I allowed her to come in with me."

The child went directly up to the lounge. She did not appear to notice Elizabeth, who was sitting close by, and brushed past her so rudely, as she bent down to kiss Helene's hand, that a button upon her sack caught in the delicate trimming of Elizabeth's dress and tore it. Bella lifted her head and glanced at the mischief she had done; then she turned and went across to Herr von Walde to give him her hand.

"Well," said he, withholding his hand, "have you no apology to make for your awkwardness?"

She made no reply, and retired to the side of her mother, upon whose cheeks the ominous red spots appeared. The look which she cast upon Elizabeth showed that her daughter was not the cause of her irritation.

"Well, child, can't you speak?" asked Herr von Walde, rising.

"Fraulein Ferber sat so close," said the baroness in a tone of excuse, as Bella continued obstinately silent.

"Indeed, I should have moved aside. There is no great harm done," said Elizabeth, and she held out her hand to Bella with an enchanting smile. But the child took no notice of it, and hid both her hands in her dress.

Without a word, Herr von Walde approached her, took her by the arm, and led her directly to the door, which he opened. "Go instantly to your room," he said, "and do not come where I am again unless I particularly desire you to do so."

The baroness was raging inwardly. Her countenance worked for a moment, but what could she do? She was powerless to contend with the violence and barbarism of this man, who was master here, and who now took his seat again with a composure that betrayed an utter unconsciousness of the cruelty of his behavior. Her prudence obtained the upper hand.

"I hope, dear Rudolph," said she, and her voice trembled a little, "that you will not reckon on this slight misdemeanor against Bella. Pray, make some allowance—it is all the fault of her governess."

"Miss Mertens? Indeed, it must have cost her, with her innate gentleness and refinement, infinite pains to train Bella to conduct herself as she has just done."

The baroness blushed scarlet; but she controlled herself. "Heavens!" she cried, determined to change the subject; "this stupid circumstance has made me forget to tell you that Emil has ridden over from Odenberg. He got wet through on horseback, and is just changing his dress. May he pay his respects?"

Helene's cheeks glowed, and a ray of happiness shot from her eyes; but she said not a word, only dropping her face so as to conceal every sign of her inward agitation.

"Certainly," replied Herr von Walde. "Does he intend to make some stay here?"

"He will be here for a few days, with your permission."

"By all means. Then we shall see him in your room when we come to take coffee."

"He will be most happy. Will you not come immediately? My maid tells me that all is in readiness here to receive you."

Elizabeth arose, and prepared to take her leave. Herr von Walde, as soon as he saw this, looked inquiringly at the baroness. Doubtless he expected that she would extend an invitation to the young girl, but just at this moment the lady discovered that the gardener's arrangement of the flower-stand in the window was "too charming," and in enraptured contemplation of a bunch of azaleas she turned her back upon Elizabeth.

Fraulein Ferber courted profoundly and left the room, after Helene had repeated, in a trembling voice, her expressions of gratitude. Without, in the corridor, the most Herr von Walde. At sight of her he quickened his place, casting a lightning glance around to assure himself that no listener was near. Before she was aware of it, he had seized Elizabeth's hand, imprinted a glowing kiss upon it, and whispered: "How rejoiced I am to see you once more!"

Her astonishment was so great that she could not at first find a word to say. She drew back her hand as though she had been stung, and she accepted her repulse, because at that very moment the door of Helene's room opened and Herr von Walde appeared. Hoffeld raised his hat to Elizabeth as if he had just seen her, and his features subsided into an expression of utter indifference as he walked toward his relative.

Elizabeth was disgusted with his face—first, at the insulting familiarity, which made her blood boil with indignation, and then, at the denial of any acquaintance before a third person. Her maternal pride was deeply wounded.

She reproached herself that she had not rebuked his impertinence boldly upon the spot. A crimson flush glowed in her cheeks with shame that she should be treated so by any man; it seemed as if the spot upon her hand, where his hot lips had rested, still burned, and she hastily held it beneath the stream of a fountain in the park, that the imaginary stain might be washed away.

Much agitated, she reached her home, and complained with tears to her mother of the insult she had received. Frau Ferber was a sensible woman, possessed of clear, calm insight. She was convinced by Elizabeth's resentment that her child's heart was not in the least danger, and her fears were laid to rest. It was easy to defend her from attacks from without; but who could guard her from the grief that a misplaced attachment would entail upon her?

"You know now what manner of man Herr von Hoffeld is," she said. "It will not be difficult strictly to avoid all future contact with him, and if he should presume in spite of your efforts, he must be sternly repulsed. His conduct seems to be the result of aristocratic conceit and cowardice, two qualities which will probably deter him from any further advances, when he discovers how disagreeable they are to you. But at all events, familiarize yourself with the thought that your behavior toward him must of necessity create an enemy who will, at some future day, put a stop to your intercourse with Fraulein von Walde. Of course such a consideration cannot for one instant lead you to hesitate as to your line of conduct. Go on your way, then, my child, quietly and with self-possession. I should certainly not advise you to give up your visits to Castle Lindhof."

"Assuredly not! no, that will not do!" cried Elizabeth, quickly. "What would my uncle say if the chicken should actually come flying back to creep beneath the shelter of home?"

She added, smiling through her tears. "It would be wretched indeed, if with all the strength of which I have boasted, I am not strong enough to repulse an impertinent man so effectually that he shall desist from all future advances."

She recalled her conversation with Herr von Walde, and found, to her satisfaction, that she must certainly be exceedingly brave, for assuredly it had required no small exercise of courage, while confronting that stern countenance to declare her own convictions, which attacked so decidedly the proud edifice of his ancestral pride. She had expected every moment to see his glance sheathe itself in ice again, as it had done in conversation with the baroness; but the singular glow and expression which had struck her when first he addressed her, had not faded from his eyes—she could almost, in fact, believe that she detected beneath his moustache a smile lurking around the corners of his mouth.

Perhaps he had determined to-day to enact the part of the lion toward the mouse. He had magnanimously permitted a little girl to pour out her naive effusions at his feet, where his aristocratic pride, since he bent his aristocratic back to pick them up and examine them, was not to be thought of—he probably amused him as exemplifying the saying of the dog, "haying the moon." She repeated this continually to herself, that she might stamp fresh upon her treacherous memory his general reputation for boundless arrogance.

She could not tell how she became conscious of it, but she was now perfectly aware that she should suffer unspeakably if Herr von Walde's arrogance was ever exercised toward her; so she must be doubly on her guard and not allow herself to be misled by his observance of the usual forms of common politeness, of his high regard for which the next day brought her a most convincing proof.

CHAPTER XI.

She had just gotten ready, the next afternoon, to go into the garden with her work-basket, when the bell rang at the gate in the wall. In consideration of the scene of the day before, her surprise was certainly justifiable, when, as the gate was opened, she saw Bella standing before her. Behind the child stood Miss Mertens and the elderly gentleman, with whom Elizabeth had lately had an evening encounter. As she entered Bella extended her hand, but looked shy and confused and said not a word. Elizabeth, much amazed, at once guessed the reason of her coming, and tried to help her in her embarrassment by saying how glad she was to have a visit from a little girl, and by asking her to come into the garden. But Miss Mertens stepped forward.

"Do not make it all so pleasant for Bella, Fraulein Ferber," said she, "she has been expressly ordered to make an apology to you for her misconduct yesterday. I must insist upon her speaking."

These words, spoken with much firmness, and still more, perhaps, the sheltering darkness of the hall through which Elizabeth was leading her by the hand, at last loosened Bella's tongue, and she slowly begged pardon for her fault, and promised never to be so naughty again.

"And now that is happily settled," cried the gentleman, as he advanced to Miss Mertens' side, and with an arch smile made a low bow to Elizabeth.

"It may, perhaps, strike you as very odd," he said, "that I should attach myself to this reconciliation deputation, with which I have no concern; but I have an idea that on such occasions people are rather inclined to overlook all slight transgressions, and so, there can be no more favorable moment for smuggling in a stranger."

"My name is Ernst Reinhard; I am the Secretary and traveling companion of Herr von Walde, and I have had no more earnest desire for a week past than to become acquainted with the interesting family at Castle Gnadeck."

Elizabeth kindly extended her hand. "These old walls have witnessed so many of the misdeeds of the robber knights of old, that we have no right to condemn smuggling; you will be cordially welcomed by my parents."

She led the way and opened the huge oaken door leading into the garden.

Her parents and uncle, who, with little Ernst, were sitting under the lindens, arose as the strangers entered, and came toward them. Elizabeth introduced them all round, and then, at a sign from her mother, returned to the house to order some refreshments for the guests. When she came back again, Bella had already laid aside her sack and parasol, and with a joyous face was sitting in a swing which had been hung between two trees. Ernst was swinging her, and seemed not a little proud of his new playmate.

"Indeed," said Reinhard, pointing to Bella as she flew up in the swing, shouting with delight, "no one who had seen that child this morning and her sullen bearing, as she went into Herr von Walde's apartment to ask forgiveness for yesterday's misconduct, or her dejected and angry expression, when he told her he could not receive her again until she had personally begged pardon of Fraulein Ferber,"—here Elizabeth reddened, and became absorbed in her preparation of some bread and honey for the two children,—"would recognize her for the same being, whose face is now beaming with the innocent joy of childhood."

The hour passed very pleasantly. Miss Mertens was both refined and cultivated, and Reinhard told many delightful stories of his travels and researches.

"Probably we should not have thought of returning home for some time," he said in concluding an interesting account of adventures in Spain, "had we not received unfavorable accounts from Thuringia, which, following fast upon each other, induced Herr von Walde to give up new plans for travel. The ambition of power often makes its possessor blind. The incautious request from a feminine pen that Herr von Walde would pension off the good old village pastor at Lindhof, because he had grown gray and was incapable of training the souls under his care, capped the climax of our unwelcome news, and we set out for home immediately."

"When, late in the evening, as we approached Lindhof, we left the highroad and our carriage, that we might go the rest of the way on foot, we met with a most charming adventure."

"How odd! look, Reinhard, what do you suppose is the meaning of that light in the ruins of Castle Gnadeck?" asked Herr von Walde.

"It means that there is a lamp there," was my reply. "We must investigate this," he said, and we ascended the hill. The light grew brighter, and at last, to our astonishment, we saw that it streamed from two high illuminated windows. And then, light steps were heard behind us, something white fluttered among the bushes, and suddenly, what I took for a being of ethereal mold hovered before us upon the moonlit lawn. I took heart and approached, expecting every moment that the airy form would vanish before the breath of my lips; but alas! its own lips opened, and told of two well-trained goals and a canary bird."

All laughed at this account.

"While we were descending the mountain," Reinhard continued, "my master said not a word; but from certain looks I judged that he was quite as ready to laugh at me as you were; it would have been a fine thing if you could have accompanied us as a good fairy, for we left all the moonlight and beauty behind us upon the mountain, and had to walk on through the dim valley, where the mists were rising, and where there was nothing, not even a wandering zephyr to bid us welcome home. At Castle Lindhof numberless lights were flitting to and fro like will-o'-the-wisps. The carriage, with our luggage, had already arrived, and seemed to have produced the same effect by the sound of its rolling wheels, as that ascribed to Lucifer at the day of judgment, for there was each hurrying and confusion, and disorder reigning there when we arrived, that for my part, I should have been thankful to retrace my steps, and lay my weary head upon the first quiet mossy spot who, in the midst of the universal confusion, presented an appearance of placid self-possession was the chaplain, Mohring. He had put on a white cravat with great dispatch, and welcomed the master of the house at the foot of the grand staircase in a speech full ofunction."

"The reign of that stern gentleman is at an end now, is it not?" asked the forester.

"Yes, indeed, thank God!" replied Miss Mertens. "He will leave Lindhof in a short time. Baroness Lessen's influence has procured him a good parish. He could not endure to sink back into insignificance where he had so lately held sway. I can readily understand it, for he had ruled with all the persecuting zeal of a tyrant who seeks to tread every one beneath his feet. He would not allow a thought in his kingdom without his permission, and even the baroness, his mistress, upon whom he smiled so civilly, felt his iron rule. Every one in the household, without exception, was obliged to write down, in the evening, the thoughts and sentiments that had occurred to them during the avocations of the day. I can see before me now the poor housemaids, to whom even a short letter to their friends at home is a greater task than a long ironing-day, sitting in that cold room on the winter evenings, holding the pen in their tired clumsy fingers, and beating their poor brains for something to say."

"Yes, if the chaplain had worked as hard as I have done the whole day, one would whisper softly and angrily to another, 'he would not relish writing much.'"

"Indeed, I think so," cried the forester. "What a shameful system of torture and oppression has been carried on there under the cloak of service to the Lord!"

"The worst of it all is," said Ferber, "that unless a man is possessed of great culture, or of a special fund of good humor, he ends by detecting not only his tormentors but the whole subject of religion that causes him such suffering. Thus, he is led more and more astray from all faith, while his outer observance of forms must be stricter than ever, his subsistence depending upon his wearing the mask well. All this gives the death-blow to true religion among the people."

"Well, we are fortunate in at least having one among us who has force of character enough and sufficient strength of will, to say, 'Thus far shalt thou go and no further! Zounds! it came upon us like a second deluge!' said the forester."

"True, Herr von Walde is possessed of an energy and force of character such as falls to the lot of but few," replied Miss Mertens, quickly. "His mouth is closed, but his eyes are wide open, and servility, malice, and hypocrisy, quail before them and then drop their masks."

In the meanwhile Reinhard had been attentively examining the walls of the ruinous wing of the old castle which bounded the garden on the south. Three large, pointed, arched windows, faultless in shape, extended upward to the height of the second story from about six feet from the ground. Close beside them a curious jutting projected far into the garden, forming a deep corner, where grew a giant oak, which stretched some of its boughs through the two nearest sashless windows far into the airy, cool apartment within, which must once have been the chapel of the castle, intended to accommodate a large number of worshippers, for it extended through the entire depth of the wing. Opposite these windows were three others of like dimensions; they had been less exposed to wind and weather, and had preserved some fragments of colored glass in their delicately carved stone rosettes. Through them could be seen the dark court-yard, with its crumbling, ghastly walls like a picture painted in gray. The garden side of this wing looked gay and odd enough. The most extraordinary caprices had here heaped together all styles of windows and decorations; judging by the exterior, the old building must have been a perfect labyrinth of rooms, passages, and staircases. The jutting alone seemed to be in a most dangerous state of decay. It inclined perceptibly to one side, and appeared to be awaiting the moment when it should bury the blooming life of the oak beneath its masses of stone. It had thrown a green mantle coquettishly over its falling, an impenetrable garment of ivy wreathed it all over from the ground to the ruinous roof, and effectually concealed every crack and aperture in the masonry. Some crack and spray of the ivy had crept across the oak and the jutting up to the sculptured arms on the principal front of the chapel, which looked forth grimly enough from beneath its intrusive decoration.

"I attempted," said Ferber, "to explore this wing as far as I could, shortly after my arrival here, for its peculiar style of architecture interests me greatly; but I could not get further than the steps, where, indeed, it seemed dangerous to tread, and the weight of the ruins has caused the ceiling of the chapel to sink considerably, so that it seems ready to tumble at the slightest breath of wind. The jutting has only lately looked so threatening in consequence of several severe storms. It must be taken away, for it makes a part of the garden inaccessible to us. If I could have engaged any workmen, it should have been pulled down before now."

After this explanation, Reinhard had no further to say, as he expressed it, for wandering about in the old ruins. But he was all the more interested in the connecting building, and first, to show his guests his dwelling, and then, to ascend the rampart behind them. Ferber was very capable and skilful, and employed every moment of his leisure in improving his new possession. With his own hands he had mended the steps which led to the top of the rampart, and they arose now smooth and white from the close-shaven turf which clothed its sloping side. On top, the tolerably wide plateau was strewn with fresh gravel, and in the centre of it, embowered in the lindens boughs which overshadowed the basin below, stood a group of home-made garden chairs and a table. While they leaned against the breastwork and enjoyed the confined but lovely view from the steep mountain over the valley beneath, Elizabeth told the story of Sabina's ancestors, for doubtless this rampart had been the scene of her narrative.

"Br-r-r!" said Reinhard, shuddering. "The wall is high, and when I imagine below there, instead of that mossy carpet, the sluggish, slimy waters of a castle-ditch full of frogs and lizards, I cannot possibly understand the resolution required to throw one's self over."

"But," said Miss Mertens, "despair has led many a one to seek a death even more horrible."

At this moment Elizabeth saw in her mind the glowing, passionate expression with which Hoffeld had hastened toward her on the preceding evening. She remembered the disgust that she had experienced at his touch, and she thought to herself that it would not be very difficult to imagine the position of the persecuted girl.

"Come in, child," said her uncle, rousing her from reverie. "Are you listening to hear the grass grow that you stand there so silent?"

Beneath his clear gaze, and at the sound of his strong, honest voice, the terrible vision vanished in an instant.

"No, uncle," she replied, laughing, "that I shall not attempt, even though I do boast that I have wonderfully keen eyes and ears for the processes of nature."

He took her hand, and led her after the others, who were just entering the house. At the top of the steps, Bella came running to Miss Mertens. She had several picture-books in one hand, and with the other she drew her governess into Elizabeth's room.

"Only think, Miss Mertens, you can see our castle from here!" she cried. "That they were the owners of Lindhof she seemed firmly to believe, and no wonder. The way in which the baroness had, until now, wielded her sceptre, had left no doubt in the child's mind that her mother was the indisputable mistress of Lindhof. "Look," she continued gaily, "do you see the path down there? Uncle Rudolph has just ridden past. He saw me, and waved his hand to me. Mamma will be glad that he is kind to me again."

Miss Mertens admonished her to be a good little girl, and get her hat and sack, for it was time to go. Elizabeth and Ernst accompanied them out into the park.

"We have stayed too long," said Miss Mertens anxiously, as she took leave of the Ferbers and stepped out into the forest-clearing. "I must be prepared for a tempest this evening."

THE HONORS OF CAMBRIDGE.

It is fortunate that the most rapid and intolerant among the apologists of exclusiveness in University education are now no more. Had they lived to see a member of the Jewish community "Senior Wrangler" of Cambridge University they might have fancied the doom of the Church of England sealed, and the sun of Britain's glory set. Lord Eldon said that the English Church must be supported at all hazards, and the best way of affording it support was only to admit her own members to offices of honor, trust, or emolument. To achieve that object the great Tory lawyer and his party placed all who bore the hated names Dissenter, Catholic, or Jew, under the ban of a political and social ostracism. By indomitable resolution Dissenters have gradually got rid of the civil and educational disabilities which their religious convictions involved, and in competition for University honors have more than held their own with the sons of the dominant Church. It is only a few years since the great seats of learning in England were opened to the Disciples of Dissent, and but as yesterday since aliens from the Church of England could compete for the rewards of distinguished scholarship. This stubbornly-prolonged exclusiveness naturally gives piquancy to the intellectual triumphs of the "quondam" proscribers.

As mathematical and preliminary to classical honors at Cambridge, it may give some idea of Mr. Hartog's general scholastic proficiency to mention that, while a student in the University of London, he took the chief prizes in classics and modern languages. In all probability, therefore, we shall hear of Mr. Hartog again. The versatility of his powers argues not skilful training alone, but superior intellectual vigor.

Happily has the day gone by when loyalty to conscientious convictions was esteemed akin to treason against the Commonwealth. It has been discovered that, as the State widens the basis of unity and fellowship, exactly in that proportion will be the strength, security, and greatness of the empire. The Jews are not a numerous body in England, and their admission to political privileges was not perhaps so imperative as the admission of Catholics or Dissenters, but their exclusion was equally unjust. During the many centuries Jews have dwelt in England, they have been distinguished for the peaceful industry in which their lives have been passed, while the commanding eminence which not a few of them attained affords conclusive evidence of their financial and commercial capacity. That capacity has indeed been often acknowledged by their bitterest antagonists, but these antagonists would not admit their possession of any higher qualities. The bigots forget that it was Jews who kept the torch of science burning when all around them was dark. There is scarcely a sphere of scientific research or walk of philosophy in which Jews have not distinguished themselves. It was because the Hebrew was shut out from every path of honorable ambition that he took refuge in avarice. In the non-age of the world's civilization, ere letters were known in Greece or art had given Rome her glory, Israel possessed a policy and laws, and had produced statesmen and philosophers, historians, and poets, to whom the world yet turns in mingled wonder and adoration. When we remember how much Europe owes to Jewish culture, it were surely a small thing to do the Jewish people justice. That, however, has scarcely been yet done. Before Mr. Hartog can take his fellowship, some modification of existing forms will require to be made. There is indeed no objection to this; but why should the necessity for the concession continue? Mr. Coleridge's bill, will we presume, give the "coup de grace" to all that is yet obnoxious in the statutes of the universities. It was in a generous spirit that these venerable seats of learning were originally founded, and by opening them to the nation without distinction of sect, we shall only emulate the benefactors of antiquity.

"The Paris house of Rothschild has informed its agents, through circulars, that the firm in consequence of the death of Baron James, has passed into the hands of his sons, Alphonse and Gustave. According to reliable authorities, the fortune left behind by the Baron, who in the year 1812 came to Paris worth about a million of francs, roughly estimated, somewhat exceeds 2000 millions francs; and initiated English financiers assert that in all the United Kingdom there is no fortune comparable to that left behind by the Baron. Beside his mansions in Paris, the castle in the Bois de Boulogne and the magnificent estate of La Ferriere, he possessed in Paris 51 large houses, also property of a similar kind in the largest towns of Europe. In Italy especially the property of the Rothschilds have within the last two years increased, and the Baron possessed at Rome, Naples, Florence and Tunis several palaces and houses."

THE GHETTO OF PRAGUE.

In the north-east of Prague, on the right bank of the Moldau, precisely opposite the fortified castle of Hradchin, there is a mass of narrow and tortuous lanes, which, when they were surrounded by walls, prevented the inmates from leaving their quarter, except through a small number of gates. In these houses, the Jews, about 250 in number passed many sad days from the period when pagan Bohemia admitted them, to our time. Several times they were expelled from the city, then recalled as by a miracle. The last persecution, or, at least, the last project of expulsion, was that under the Empress Maria Theresa. When the Prussians, at the close of the War of Seventeen Years, evacuated the city, the Jews were accused of having favored the enemy. They were first, in virtue of the permission giving them by the Empress, to be pillaged by the Prussians, to whom their pay was due; then they were expelled from the city, but soon afterwards re-admitted.

It was only the Emperor Ferdinand the Good, who, in 1845 permitted the Jews of Prague, to reside outside the Ghetto, the name of which has since been changed into Josephstadt, in memory of the Emperor Joseph II.

Although the Ghetto is now inhabited by the humblest classes of the Jews and the outcasts of Christian population, it nevertheless remains the meeting place of the Jews, and the theatre of their religious and commercial activity; for all the synagogues, the Jewish baths, and the offices for transacting congregational business are there. Except on Sabbaths and festivals, when the worshippers repair to the synagogues in their holiday attire, the Ghetto bears a very gloomy aspect.

The humble classes among the Jews there, being exceedingly poor, the charity of their wealthy brethren is often appealed to. It is on these occasions that the true brotherly feeling reveals itself. In few communities are benevolent institutions so well organized as at Prague. All wants of the necessitous are provided for, either by individual charity or associations. Nor must we overlook the circumstance that the Jewish population unhesitatingly engages in the most laborious and menial work in order to earn its daily bread honestly; and borne in mind that through the intolerance of Christian workmen, Jews are either not admitted as apprentices or received into the respectable guilds. Special mention among the charitable institutions is deserved by the Jewish hospital, which is administered in an exemplary manner, and the two orphan asylums, one for boys, and the other for girls.

From the religious point of view, however, it is to be regretted that in so large a community as that of Prague (which is said to number some 15,000 souls) there should be so little interest in Jewish literature and progress in general. As Prague possesses no general synagogal administration (the congregations acting independently of each other) abuses have crept into isolated places of worship. However, this defect is being perceived, for one synagogue after the other is beginning to introduce order in the services as well as weekly sermons. Five of the larger synagogues have each a regular preacher.

The most ancient synagogue of Prague is that which is called Alt-Nue Schule. It is a gloomy building, situated several feet below the level of the street, and to which a great number of legends are attached, in which this ancient community is exceedingly rich. Having descended several steps, one reaches the vestibule, which is called the Polish oratory. Hence by descending several steps, one reaches the synagogue, built in Gothic style, and supported by two massive pillars. A banner, 30 feet long, given to the synagogue by the Emperor Leopold, rises high in the air. On the floor there is an estrade, surrounded by iron railings. Light struggles in through narrow windows, and on the walls are several inscriptions which can only be read with difficulty. On the right are extended two ovals which mark the level of the inundations of 1845 and 1862. It is unpleasant to see divine services here celebrated with so little dignity. The "Mitzvoh" is still sold to the highest bidder, and with much noise; talking, and even jokes, are common. And yet in other synagogues it is still worse, especially during the morning service, in which all decorum is missed. For some years the communal administration has endeavored to found a central place in Prague for Jewish science, at present very little cultivated there. In the school called Talmud Torah, a number of poor children receive instruction in Hebrew and religion. The first class, like the "yeshiboth" of old, constitutes a kind of rabbinical school. The professors are Doctors Kaempel, Wessely, and Stein; and it is to be regretted that this school should only be attended by Hungarians who are not sufficiently advanced in secular knowledge to be admitted to the seminary at Breslau, which numbers as many Austrian as Prussian students. At present the communal administration of Prague allows to every student of its city in the Breslau Seminary the sum of 400 florins annually. The principal school of the Jews is well organized, and organized by the State.

Opposite this synagogue is situated the famous cemetery. Several hundred ancient epitaphs on the tombstones produce a considerable effect. Here are seen the tombs of the greatest coryphees of Judaism, our most celebrated doctors of the middle ages. A large hexagonal stone full of inscriptions covers the grave of the celebrated Reb. Low. His fame as an alchemist was universal, so that the Emperor Rudolph, as tradition says, paid him a visit in his laboratory. Over the door in which he lived his scutcheon is still seen.

It is to be regretted that the municipality cares little for this quarter of the city. In consequence of this indifference to the position of the district on the bank of the Moldau, this was especially the case in the springs of the years 1845 and 1862. These were trying times, fully bringing out the charitable feeling of the community, when the numerous poor, whose scanty property was destroyed by the flood, had to be succoured. The courage of numbers in the community likewise shone forth, as many had to be rescued from the raging waters at the peril of life.

ALEXANDER QUICHE.

THE FOREBODING RAVEN.—A tame raven has just saved the small town of Pont-Audon (Eure) from partial destruction. The house of its master, a baker, caught fire, and the man was awakened by the screams of the bird just in time to prevent the conflagration from extending to an adjoining wood-yard and building, in which a large quantity of brandy was stored. The poor raven could not, however, be rescued and was burnt to death.

THE VILLAGE OF Buzan Ariege, France, has lately been almost entirely destroyed by fire. The church, priest's residence, and nearly four hundred houses or farm buildings were burned down in a few hours.

THE LAW OF NEWSPAPERS.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as willing to continue their subscription.
2. If subscribers wish their papers discontinued, publishers may continue to send them until all charges are paid.
3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office or place to which they are sent, they are held responsible until they settle their bill and give notice to discontinue them.
4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the paper is sent to the former address, they are held responsible. Notice should always be given of removal.
5. The courts have decided that refusing to take a paper or periodical from the office, or removing and leaving it uncollected for, is a prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.
6. Postmasters would oblige, by a strict fulfillment of the regulations requiring them to notify publishers, once in three months, of papers not taken from their office by subscribers.
7. Under the law of Congress papers are not charged postage in the country in which they are published.

Country patrons will oblige by remitting us their subscriptions now due; and those who may happen to come to the city, will favor us much by calling at our office, 420 MONTGOMERY STREET, and settling their accounts.

PASSING AWAY—ABIDING FOREVER.

"One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh; but the earth abideth forever."—Eccles. 1. 4.
What a fund of thought lies in these simple words! A philosopher's commentary upon history.

We see a generation of men struggling for greatness, seeking honor, fame, and riches; working with might and main for that which they prize as the greatest of earthly gifts. Yet but a little time—and the whole generation passeth away, another generation cometh; but the dumb and senseless earth survives them all.

Here is a race of men seized with the mad lust for conquest. A nation covets territory not its own; war is waged, and the envied lands are strewn with dead; the ground is moist with the blood of friend and foe; the dumb earth echoes the wild cry of the dying warriors. Men fight as though the world itself and its existence hung quivering on the issue. No one would think, to see them fight, that those senseless hills and tranquil valleys are the sole cause. The battle is fought and won. The conqueror is proud of his grand victory. To him it seems as if the whole world were his. The vanquished bend their heads in sorrow and in shame. To them it seems the world is at an end. But yet a few years, and the proud victor is vanquished himself by Death; the consequences of the fearful strife are effaced, and history records the deadly struggle as a fratricidal contest, without just cause, and without lasting effect. The rivals have passed away; their descendants are friends and brothers; the land for which the war was waged is now a scene of peace; and the "everlasting hills," the witnesses of all the battle storm, now cast their quiet shadows on fields where golden sheaves of corn are lying, just on the spot where once the dead and wounded warriors lay. The struggle is long past. The one generation has passed away, and another generation has taken its place, but those everlasting hills remain.

And, in the realms of society, what wars have been waged between party and party, between class and class! Men have set up a notion of their own, called it a principle, worshipped it, sacrificed to it, influence, and means, and spent all life in rivalry, with misdirected aim and meaningless end. Wait but a few short years, and the imaginary principle for which they contended is whirled away in the hurricane of progress; that generation has passed away, another generation has taken its place, with new ideas, new principles, perhaps as faulty as the old, and still the world goes on—"the earth abideth forever."

And as to individuals, who shall recount the mercenary strifes and enmity which have set brother against brother, friend against friend, in the mad thirst for wealth? Who shall find scorn enough for those who fight about money, as though its possession were eternal? Who shall say how many lives have been embittered by the hatred which they themselves have fostered, and by the miserable thought of revenge which they have cherished as their darling idea? What matters it? A few years pass and all is changed. All the petty squabbles, which at the time seemed so important, are absolutely forgotten. The rivals have passed away. Their enmity has died with them, and the world still goes on—"the earth abideth forever."

Well, what is the use of all this sentiment? It is a mass of truisms which none will venture to dispute. Yet they have their moral.

Such facts teach us to be tolerant in our thoughts, humble in our conduct, diffident of our opinions, mindful of our fallibility. Why fight so hard, when we scarce know whether our cause is just? To-day we think we are right; to-morrow one little fact just comes to light, and shows that we were wrong. At best our knowledge is but twilight. We grope about, uncertain where we tread.

And why sacrifice peace and good-will in the pursuit of gain? Why fight so hard for treasures so short-lived? Why foster pride in wealth which melts away? We see the rich grow poor; we see the beggar become a millionaire. It is quite proverbial that the rich man, who falls into poverty, declares his misfortune to be due to causes over which he had no control. This is often true. But the poor man who grows rich might more frequently say, that his good fortune has been due to the like uncontrollable circumstances. That which fools call chance, and wise men Providence, contributes more to success than the successful care to admit.

And what if the merit of success be all our own? Self-reliance is good; but it must go hand in hand with humility. What right have we to assert superiority, and make a show of greatness? Will it last? Where will it be, when our "generation passeth away, and another generation cometh?"

Above all, let the instability of all human affairs afford the great incentive to lay up a store of good deeds for eternity. What use is there in giving all our time and energy to the pursuit of gain, without aim or end, but the mere love of accumulating? To gather wealth as the heavens gather moisture, so as to distribute it again to the famished earth—such gathering is worthy of man, and the wealth so acquired "abideth for ever." Nor is it the rich alone who can thus gain everlasting wealth. The poor man, too, who daily sets aside a portion of his only wealth—to purposes of well-doing, striving to improve himself, his children, and his neighbors, speaking a kind word where kindness is food to a starving heart, giving a helping hand to raise those who have fallen, and silencing that gruff voice of virtuous indignation which makes sinners sin again—such a man lays up a store of riches which last forever. What if poverty be his lot on earth, so long as there is wealth awaiting him in a better home! To him life here is hope, and life hereafter hope fulfilled and realized.

And when we see how generation after generation passes away, how man-made principles fade, how human laws wither and die, must we not look with awe, respect, and love upon those everlasting hills—Religion and its principles? They never change. In every age and clime they are the standards of right, when all other standards fail. Opinions alter—the principles of right or wrong, set down in the Divine code, never. There we see typical laws—laws which, applied to the requirements of all times, yield the best types of right and justice. They govern the world, though the world so often ignores it. Without religion and its teachings, the world could not live; with it, it possesses everlasting youth; and thus it is that, though "one generation passeth away and another generation cometh, the earth abideth for ever."

Cherish and love this grand elixir which gives life to the earth, and it will give you, too, perpetual life in the world to come.

IMPORTANT EVENTS.—Three important events now occupy the attention of the Jewish people all over the civilized world. The first is the revocation, by the Provisional Government, of the decree of banishment, enacted in 1492, in virtue of which the Spanish Jews, over half a million in number, were driven forth from their country. After the lapse of nearly four centuries, Judaism may again find a home in Iberia. On Monday (Feb. 1st) Mr. H. Guedalla, who has chiefly been instrumental in obtaining this revocation, forwarded to Madrid a magnificent scroll of the Law of Moses—no doubt the first seen there since the year which witnessed the expulsion of this race; and we shall soon hear that at the side of a Protestant church a Jewish synagogue will be reared.

The second event is the establishment of an agricultural colony by Jews in the land of their forefathers. At the annual meeting of the Universal Israelitish Alliance, lately held at Paris, Mr. Ad. Cremieux (the president) announced, amidst the loud applause of the audience, that measures had been taken for founding a Jewish settlement near Jaffa. The approaching completion of the Suez canal promises a profitable outlet to the agricultural products that might be raised in the fertile soil of the district of this part of Palestine.

The third event is a proposed universal synod, to be held in Germany in the course of the next summer. The formal invitations to the synod have been sent out to be principal Jewish communities in Europe, and, probably, also in America. One of them has reached us, and bears the signature of Rabbi Dr. L. Philippson, of Bonn, the well known editor of the "Universal Gazette of Judaism," of Rabbi Dr. Aub. Rabbi of Berlin; and Rabbi Dr. Adler, Provincial Rabbi of Cassel. These Rabbis act in the name of a conference of 24 German Rabbis, who met in August last at Cassel, when the convocation of a universal synod was resolved upon. It will thus be seen that there is still some vitality in the ancient stock of Judaism, now over 4,000 years old.—J. C.

INAUGURATION BALL.—We were pleased to note that the Chairman of the Floor Committee at the Ball given in honor of President Grant, was that worthy gentleman and respected citizen of Washington, Mr. Adolphus S. Solomons. He was a member also of the Executive Committee, and as such was one of the most prominent and energetic gentlemen in charge of the late Ball. It is no trifling matter to assist in managing a ball of such proportions, and that Mr. Solomons should have been willing to devote so much of his valuable time to such a purpose, argues well for the public spirit which actuates him. There is no man in Washington more generally esteemed, and more deserving of respect, than Mr. Solomons.—J. M.

ELECTION.—At the annual meeting of the S. F. S. & B. Association, the following were elected officers for the ensuing term: M. Waterman, President; H. Steinhoff, Vice President; M. Sichel, Treasurer; P. N. Feldman, Secretary.

PHILADELPHIA.—A long-needed change in the dispensation of charity is now in course of consummation. It is a union of all our charitable associations in this city. The bill authorizing the various organizations to accomplish it, has been presented in our State legislature.—O.

EDWARD KRIE. the publisher of the Leipzig Gartenlaube, who, twenty years ago, was a poor clerk, is now a millionaire. His journal, the Gartenlaube, has nearly four hundred thousand subscribers.

JEWISH STATISTICS.

We extract the following interesting statistics from an article contributed to one of the magazines of last month.

The writer, in computing the Jewish population of the world, calls to his aid the celebrated Dr. Pressel, to whom he confesses he is much indebted for the following statistics:

"According to Dr. Pressel the Jews in Poland amount to 571,678, while a recent Polish writer computes their number at 1,400,000. Again, Pressel reckons the Jewish population of Moldavia and Wallachia at 37,000, while recent careful investigations have shown that it amounts to more than three times that number, or to 115,849 souls. The British Jews must also be more numerous than is supposed, since good authority states them at from 40,000 to 50,000 in London alone. Lastly, while Dr. Pressel calculates the Jewish population of European Turkey at 70,000, there are authorities who claim not less than 90,000 Jewish inhabitants for Constantinople itself.

Jerusalem has about 9,000 Jews, Safed 3,000, Tiberias 15,000, Hebron 500, Joppa 200, etc.—the total in the Holy Land amounting, as before stated, to between 15,000 and 16,000. It will have been observed that numerically the Jews are very unequally distributed over the various countries. This no doubt, is in great part owing to their past history. Still, it remains a striking fact that by far the largest proportion of Jews is found in the latitude of Jerusalem. From some lands they are conspicuously absent, partly from legal restrictions, and partly, perhaps, owing to the character of the Gentile population. Scotland numbers very few Jews; from Spain and Portugal they are virtually excluded; nor are there Jews in Norway (population 3,150,686) in some parts of Germany (Lichtenstein, population 7,150; Schaumburg, population 30,144) and in some provinces of Austria (Salzburg, population 146,769; Carinthia, population 332,456; Caroleia, population 451,941). In other parts of Austrian Empire the Jewish population is disproportionately small. Thus, Upper Austria, with a population of 709,450, numbers only four Jews; Styria, with 1,056,773, has only six Jews; the Tyrol, with 851,016 inhabitants, has 548 Jews; and the military boundary, with 1,046,922, with only 404 Jews. Yet despite constant persecutions, the Israelites have proved very faithful to the House of Hapsburg, and at this moment the Austrian army contains not less than 9,850 Jewish soldiers. On the other hand, there are countries and towns in which the Jewish population abounds quite beyond the proportion which might have been anticipated from their past history in those districts, or, till quite recently, from their political position.

At present their number within the states of the Church amount to 9,237. Still it is by no means where they are most protected that they are found in largest proportion. Their influx into Roumania (Moldo-Wallachia) may be accounted for by the escape of conscripts, and by the exceedingly loose state of the law in a land where money proves so much of a talisman with officials, high and low. But this scarcely explains their continuance, to the number of 115,840, in a country so notorious by its recent persecutions. From Russian Poland escape is not so easy. It is remarkable that in Warsaw, where it said to be scarcely safe for an Israelite to show himself during the Easter festivities, one in every three inhabitants should be Jewish.

The subjoined gives the relative proportions of Jews to Gentiles: "Throughout the world, 1 Jew in 1,500 inhabitants; Belgium, 1 in 3,000; Greece, 1 in 900; Britain, 1 in 700; Italy, 1 in 700; France, 1 in 500; Prussia, 1 in 90; Holland, 1 in 52; Turkey, 1 in 53; Austria, 1 in 32; Algeria and North Africa, 1 in 10; Hamburg, 1 in 32; Frankfurt, 1 in 17; Amsterdam, 1 in 12; Warsaw, about 1 in 3; Jerusalem, 1 in 2." The writer concludes his paper thus:

"The last, but perhaps the most remarkable, physical peculiarity to which we shall call attention is the comparatively large rate of increase and the longevity of the Jewish race. Assuming its present numbers to amount, in round figures, to close upon nine millions, their rate of increase has, indeed not fallen short of what it had been in Biblical and even in post-Biblical times. As standard of comparison we possess here three data, of which two at least, are trustworthy. We know that during the four centuries of their stay in Egypt, notwithstanding oppression and persecution, their numbers increased from 70 to about 2,400,000. This is a very large ratio, even taking into account well known climatic influences, and, above all, the fact that to these 70 individuals a considerable number of slaves and dependents must, no doubt be added. While in Algeria not only the European, but even the native population is said to be decreasing, the Jews continue to show an excess of births over deaths. Again, Dr. Pressel states that in his own district the number of Jewish to Gentile stands related as 5-5 to 3-8. Connected with this is another remarkable fact, brought out in the ecclesiastical registers of Prussia, from which it appears that, whereas among Gentiles 143 children were still-born in 100,000, that proportion among the Jews amounted to only 39. In reference to the comparative morality of Jews and Gentiles, a twist, drawn up by Neuville, and derived from the official registers of the city of Frankfurt between the years 1846 and 1848, shows that the balance of general longevity is largely in favor of the Jews. In infancy the death-rate among the Gentiles is more than double that among the Jews.

Dr. M. Levy has recently computed that the average duration of life among the Gentiles is 26 years, and among the Jews 37.—J. R.

THE JEWISH TIMES.—The first number of a new paper with the above name, published in New York, has reached us. It presents a beautiful typographical appearance, and is filled with interesting and original reading matter in the English and German language. It states in its salutatory, that "its special and immediate object will be the advocacy of progress and reform." We wish the new paper all success.

RE-ELECTED.—The congregation Emanu-El, at a meeting held on Sunday, April 11th, re-elected their worthy Rabbi, Rev. Dr. Elkan Cohn, who has occupied the pulpit of the congregation for the past nine years in the ablest manner, unanimous for the next term of five years.

The highest mathematical honor in England—the first wranglership at Cambridge—has this year fallen, for the first time, to a Jew. His name is Numa Edward Hartog, and he is the son of the Professor of French of the Jews College.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

GERMANY.—Dr. Hertz has been appointed Professor of Anatomy in the University of Erlangen.

A worthy Jewish couple of Lichens lately celebrated their "diamond" wedding. The mayor and council of the town attended in person to offer their congratulations on the happy event.

The religious confirmation of Jewish children which had heretofore been compulsory in Wurtemberg has now been regulated to the class of voluntary acts. A short time ago two Jewish parents refused to allow their children to be confirmed. The wardens of the congregation imposed on each a fine of one guilder. It was further intimated to them that a fine would be enacted annually, in case the parents continued to object to their children's confirmation until the latter attained their eighteenth year. The parents having appealed against this decision to the Minister of Public worship, that functionary decreed that the community had no right to levy any fine in such a case, and that it rested entirely with the parents to have the children confirmed or not.

PRUSSIA.—A most imposing ceremony took place in Cologne, on the 12th. The want of a Jewish Hospital has long been seriously felt; in spite of many efforts to establish one, no tangible results had followed until the M.M. Elsbater had one erected at their sole cost in memory of their departed mother. Not only have these munificent benefactors defrayed the whole expense of the erection, but have also promised a yearly donation of $140 toward its support. On the day mentioned, the Hospital was formally handed over to the authorities, and with much pleasing festivity, while large sums of money were subscribed toward its permanent maintenance. There are forty-two candidates for the vacant Rabbinate of Crefeld. It is generally supposed that the appointment will not fall to any one who does not profess ultra-orthodoxy.

On Thursday, Feb. 25th, the sitting of the Upper House at Berlin, the Bill modifying the oath to be taken by Jews was adopted as passed by the Lower House.

Among the numerous presents offered to His Majesty the King on the occasion of the new year, particular mention has been made of a work of art, the gift of Baron Oppenheim of Cologne. It consists of a magnificent piece of silver sculpture representing an incident in the battle of Koosgratz. The work is as remarkable for its splendid execution as it is for its costly value and appropriateness.—Israelit.

HOLLAND.—In the last budget for Public Worship, there appears the sum of 38,064 florins for the expense of the Jewish religion.

A royal decree has appointed Herr L. Pincoffs president of the military council of the second military district of South Holland. Herr S. van Eigh has been nominated by the governor-general of the Dutch Indies, third secretary to the superior law courts of Batavia, and Herr Benjamin military surgeon of the first-class in the Moluccas. Doctors Israel and Rosenthal have been appointed members of the commission for the regulation of examinations in the faculty of medicine, and Dr. Coster holds a similar post with regard to the profession of apothecaries.

SPAIN.—In the address of the Provisional Government to the nation occurs the following: "Religious liberty henceforth accepted by all nations of the world, and which, far from destroying the faith of the immense majority of Spaniards, will contribute to revive and strengthen it, is particularly established, the government has proclaimed it in solemn documents, and has authorized its exercise in every case in which it has been asked."

PORTUGAL.—Some time ago the Bey of Tunis appointed as his Consul-General at Gibraltar, M. Abraham E. Levy, of Lisbon. He has now named the Chevalier Isaac Cardosa as Consul-General at Lisbon, and the honorable M. Joshua E. Levy as Vice-Consul.

BRUSSELS.—A funeral service in memory of the Prince Royal was celebrated on the 21st of January, at noon in the Jewish Temple at Brussels. All the Israelitish community assisted at the ceremony, for which the Temple had been completely draped in mourning. The King had sent 600 francs to the Chief Rabbi Astruc, for the Jews of Brussels. This sum was distributed immediately after the funeral service.

RUSSIA.—The director of the Rabbinical seminary of Wilna has received orders from the government to superintend the translation of the Hebrew prayer book into the Russian tongue. In all the Jewish schools Russian has been introduced as the language to be ordinarily used in giving instruction.

ROUMANIA.—A decree of Prince Charles, countersigned by the minister, accords to Israelites the right, which formerly belonged to them, but which was withdrawn from them by the preceding Cabinet, of competing for public and other contracts.

DUBLIN.—Small as is the number of the Hebrew profession in Ireland, several Jewish students have gained high distinctions in the Dublin University within the last two years: last June for instance, the Primate's first prize was awarded to Mr. Lepser L. Dutch, of 104 Capel street, Dublin.

We are much gratified to learn from a Dublin contemporary that, "At the Spring commencement held on the 10th inst, the Master of Arts presiding, the degree of Bachelor of Arts was conferred on Alfred L. Lazarus, (third son of the late Mr. Henry Lazarus) a gentleman whose college career is eminently distinguished by the several successful examinations he passed within a very short time.—J. R.

LONDON.—Mr. Haim Guedalla has published, in the form of a circular, his correspondence with the Provisional Government of Spain in reference to the revocation of the edict of 1492. Mr. Guedalla is now taking active measures to raise a subscription with which to construct Jewish places of worship at Madrid and Cadix.

ALL THAT SIGHING, and groaning, and gasping for breath, which troubles you so much, just after your meals, can be dispelled like dew before the sun, if you will take a wine glass of the carminative "Excellent." All that nausea and repugnance to food, which some people (especially ladies in delicate health) have at breakfast, is instantly arrested by a little Champagne, and "Excellent." Abundant testimonials may be seen at Barry & Patten's, 413 Montgomery street.

"Where do these beautiful Boys Suits come from?" we hear daily from the lips of admiring ladies; they must, surely, have been imported from Paris? The truth is they came from the manufactory of S. Fiegel, in the Masonic Temple, on Montgomery street, corner of Post.

HARTZ AT PLATT'S HALL.—Hartz, the great illusionist, opened at the above place on Wednesday evening a season of magic. His tricks are nearly all new and bewildering to behold. The most beautiful optical delusion "The Cherub in the Air" is alone worth the price of admission. The curtain raises and the audience sees a cherub's head with wings in mid air; the head lives, speaks, and sings an angelic song. At the close of the performance, Mr. Hartz distributed in a most fair manner $150 in gold; in sums from $30 downwards, to 11 persons from the audience, under the condition, that they should tell some of their acquaintances, that they had seen "The Cherub in the Air."

MAGUIRE'S OPERA HOUSE.—A crowded house nightly attests to the first class Minstrel performance given at this place of amusement. The bone solo and imitation of a horse race by the great Murphy is a very fine performance, while Cotton's inimitable singing and dancing carries the audience by storm. A grand matinee will be given on Saturday afternoon.

BARTHOLOMEW'S CIRCUS.—This splendid circus containing artists of the very first quality, and some very fine trained horses, opened last night to a crowded house. The performance was excellent, and elicited great applause. A grand matinee will be given on Saturday afternoon, at which the price of admission will be half of any other place of entertainment in this city.

HELLER AT THE METROPOLITAN.—Nightly the Metropolitan Theatre is crowded with a fashionable audience, around which Heller, the accomplished illusionist and virtuoso throws his spell. His tricks are very clever, his sallies of wit mirth provoking, and his piano playing a rare treat indeed.

BENEFIT BALL.—The students of the Pacific Business College will give a grand ball on Wednesday evening, April 21st, at Mechanics' Institute Hall, in aid of the widows and orphans of Gold Hill.

CALIFORNIA THEATRE.—To-night is the farewell benefit of the talented Irish comedian, John Collins. An excellent performance will be given.

THE UNCHANGEABLE LAND.—Things do not change in the East. As Abraham pitched his tent in Bethel, so does an Arab sheik now set up his camp. As David built his palace on Mount Zion, so would a Turkish pasha now arrange his house. In every street may be seen the hairy children of Beas, squatting on the ground, devouring a mess of lentils like that for which the rough hunter sold his birthright. Along every road plod the sons of Rechab, whose fathers, one thousand years ago, bound themselves and theirs to drink no wine, plant no tree, enter within no door—and their children have kept the oath. At every khan young men round the pan of parched corn dipped their morsel into the dish. Job's plough is still used, and the seed is still trodden in the ground by asses and kine. Olives are shaken from the bough, as directed by Isaiah; and the grafting of trees is unchanged since the days of Saul. The Syrian house is still, as formerly, only a stone tent.

SPAIN.—At Seville their exists a church, though exercising all the rights and ceremonies of the Roman Catholic faith, has declared itself independent of the powers and jurisdiction of Rome. The use of the coats and of all the ceremonies may be enjoyed free of expense. Inside a pillar is imbedded a money-box, furnishing anxious charity with an appeal. "For all expenses of this church," and not for the general advantage of the Roman hierarchy. It appears that several persons wished to be married in this church; but, says the Correspondencia, the priest first applied to the municipality of the town, so that he might be preceded by a civil marriage, then only will he confer religious consecration. This example will probably spread, for there can be but little doubt that an Independent Catholic Church would harmonize better with the Spanish character than the multifarious tenets of Protestantism.

THE SAUCILITO SALE.—The sale of lands of the Saucilito Land and Ferry Company, yesterday, at the saleroom of Maurice Dore & Co. on Montgomery street, was largely attended, the crowd of buyers extending to the sidewalk. Lots to the amount of $200,000, were sold.

THE BANKING HOUSE OF J. SELIGMAN & CO. in London, a branch of the firm in this city, have been selected by our Government to pay the salaries of its consuls, and other officials in Europe. It is the first time in the history of the United States, that a Jewish banking firm has been thus honored.

CHANGE OF FIRM.—It will be of interest to our mercantile community to hear, that Mr. Meagher has withdrawn from the eminent Dry Goods House of Meagher, Taffs & Co., and that the business will now be carried on under the name of Taffs & Co. This firm is doing the largest business in its line, on this coast.

PICNICS.—The season of picnics is beginning and no party should go to one without having in their basket a bottle of Wolff's Aromatic Schiedam Schnaps. This wonderful stimulant, while at the same time being a most palatable refreshment, will fortify the body against all diseases.

CALL, whenever you may, the store of Messrs. Sullivan & Co., No. 14 Montgomery street, is sure to be crowded by fashionable ladies, who are eager to secure one of the beautiful Cloaks of the above firm—the leading Cloak firm in this city.

The first telegram received by President Grant, was the congratulatory dispatch of the Board of Trade of Berlin, communicated through their President, Herr Meyer, who like three-fourths of his constituents, is a Hebrew.

OUR

Home Interests.

APPRECIATING THE INJURIOUS EFfects that will inevitably result to the material interests of this State, and of its citizens, by the PERMANENT withdrawal from circulation of nearly two millions of dollars annually (an existing fact) and the probability that unless it is checked this large sum of money will be increased each year, until, in a very few years, it will amount to the enormous sum of ten millions of dollars, or more, per annum, to be sent East for investment in the purchase of Life Insurance, instead of being retained at home to promote and foster, by its investment here, the commercial, mechanical and agricultural interest of our State, a large number of the prominent business men of San Francisco resolved to provide a way by means of which this growing evil could be checked, and the citizens of this and the other States of the Pacific Coast be given an opportunity to obtain insurance on their lives in a Reliable Home Institution, whose capital and assets will not be impaired or injuriously affected by the change in value that will sooner or later occur by a return to specie payments in the other States of the Union. Actuated solely by these motives, they organized and incorporated

THE CALIFORNIA MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COM-PANY, of San Francisco, and they now look to the citizens of this State, who feel an interest in its progress, to second them in their efforts to check the evil complained of. This can only be accomplished by patronizing exclusively a Home Company. It is believed that when our citizens fully realize the importance of the facts above stated, they will not require further argument to induce them to patronize.

THE SUMMIT REACHED AT LAST!

IT HAS LONG BEEN A DESIDERATUM WITH A large portion of the public to obtain a light, pure, and palatable preparation, invigorating and healthful in its effects, and which, while embracing all the elements of a popular beverage, should contain no little of alcoholic properties as to make it a desirable acquisition to Ladies, Invalids, and persons not accustomed to the use of alcoholic stimulants. The proprietors of Dr. Henley's Tonic and Grape-Root Bitters, encouraged by the wonderful success of that celebrated preparation, take pleasure in offering to the public another article, which they are confident will meet with very general favor.

DR. HENLEY'S

SPICED WINE

O. K.

BITTERS.

These Bitters are carefully prepared from the choicest Wines of California, and the Richest Spices the world affords; they act on the general system; purify the blood; renew the digestive organs, invigorate their action, and restore their natural tone and power; they stimulate the secretory powers of the liver, regulate the functions of the bowels, give buoyancy to the animal spirits, elasticity to the body, and health and vigor to the general constitution.

As we are engaged solely in the manufacture of BIT-TERS, we have superior facilities, and can supply the trade with a better and cheaper quality than any other House on this Coast. Our Bitters are for sale at all respectable Bars and Groceries. Consumers should not be imposed upon with trashy imitations, but demand the genuine article.

MORE THAN ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND

ON THIS COAST

Have taken and bear witness to the good effects of

A New and Great Discovery!

A Cure for all the Diseases the Human Family is subject to

IF TAKEN IN TIME!

The Great Blood Purifier and Renovator of the System.

A PURELY VEGETABLE PREPARATION!

Made from the roots and herbs of the Pacific Coast, and their combination has been so adjusted as to afford the best results possible. It is the great Blood-Purifier and Life Giving Principle, increasing the powers of digestion, exciting the absorbents into healthy action. A certain, safe and permanent cure for all diseases arising from an impure state of the blood or habit of the system, such as

Scrofula, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia,

Cutaneous Eruptions,

Indigestion and Salt Rheum,

Diseases of the Kidney and Bladder,

Exposure and Impudence in Life,

And all complaints arising from improper use of Mercury.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS,

Protrusion Uteri, Whites, Monthly Irregularities, Suppression, Incontinence of Urine, etc.,

Whether in the young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or late in life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that a marked improvement is soon perceptible in the health of the patient. Being a Purely Vegetable Preparation it is a safe and reliable remedy for all classes of Females. It is an infallible remedy for those many serious complaints which have their origin in derangement of the Liver, such as Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Indigestion, Constipation, Intermittent and Remittent Fevers, Colic and Dysentery, Chills, Nervous and Sick Headache, etc.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms,

Lurking in the systems of so many thousands on this Coast are effectually destroyed and removed. Nothing but ever been offered which can compare with Walker's Vinegar Bitters, for they will promptly expel all disempers concealed within the system.

The effects of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, even when taken for its cathartic properties, are very different from those of any other medicine prepared specially for that purpose.

There is no nausea or disturbance of the stomach, and instead of causing any sense of languor, or debility, it seems rather to invigorate the whole system, and excite the keenest appetite.

PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION

OF CALIFORNIA.

OBJECT.

The object of this Association is to secure a cash payment, within sixty days after the death of a subscriber, to his or her heirs or assigns, of as many dollars as there are individuals of the class to which said deceased subscriber belonged.

MEMBERSHIP.

The subscription fee is TEN DOLLARS at joining, and ONE DOLLAR on the death of each subscriber. The One Dollar from each subscriber is paid to the heirs or assigns of the deceased.

THE FUNDS.

The By-Laws of the Association require that a portion of the money received as subscription fees shall be a Sinking Fund to meet assessments falling due by the delinquencies of subscribers.

The balance of the money received to be used for the payment of the expenses incurred by the Association.

MEMBERS.

A subscriber falling to pay his or her assessment of One Dollar within THIRTY DAYS from receipt of notice, forfeits his or her Certificate, and all claims upon the Association, unless good cause is shown for further delay. A subscriber can forward money in advance, which amount will be credited to future assessments. The subscribers are divided into classes, including males and females. Each class is limited to 5,000 subscribers. As classes are filled, new ones will be formed. No person is so poor that he cannot pay Ten Dollars at joining and One Dollar occasionally, thus securing $5,000 to his or her heirs or assigns.

ADVANTAGES.

The advantages of this Association are, that no

MONEY PAID can affect it. Its benefits are easily attainable by all, and every subscriber added to the Association, adds to the interest and protection of all; the amount paid being so small, and only at long intervals, that any person can secure for his family a competency upon his death.

CLASSES.

In Class A, all persons between the ages of 15 and 40 years. In Class B, all persons between the ages of 40 and 60 years.

Any one that has not stated his or her age correctly, will forfeit all moneys paid and his or her Certificate.

One class cannot be assessed if one of another class dies. Classes have no connection with each other.

HOW TO BECOME A MEMBER.

A person desirous of becoming a subscriber must fill out an application, and forward with it

Ten Dollars by Check, Draft, or Express, in gold or silver coin. Persons can pay agents, when regularly appointed and authorized to receive money. Each subscriber should interest himself in obtaining new members, by so doing all are benefitted.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.—Ben. H. Freeman, Geo. H. Russell, Samuel A. Raymond, James A. E. Leary, Leary,

LIVER COMPLAINT is a disease much talked about, but little understood. Properly speaking, every derangement of the liver or biliary system, is a liver complaint. It is generally preceded or attended by costiveness, or alternately, costiveness or diarrhoea prevails. The coarse particles of bile become more or less mixed with blood, and obstruct the pores of the skin and small blood vessels, giving rise to various diseases of the skin, such as erysipelas, itching, blotches, pimples, boils, sore eyes, sores, and ulcers of various kinds. Dr. Walker's "Vegetable Vinegar Bitters" can be safely recommended as a safe and certain cure, as well as preventive for this class of ills.

THE TEETH.—There are no people in the world who expend so much money in the preservation of their teeth as those of the United States; yet none have worse. Hundreds of preparations are vended by the druggists and storekeepers in every town in the country for beautifying and preserving the teeth. Most of these are useless, and many of them as pernicious as they are worthless. For a reliable article, that is as harmless as it is effective, use Dr. Spencer's Fragrant Soap. It will whiten the teeth, harden the gums, and give an ambrosial sweetness to the breath.

MENLO PARK PROPERTY.—Messrs. Maurice Dore & Co. will sell on Tuesday, May 4th, 630 acres of choice Menlo Park property.

Fifteen Years' Experience

Spiegel's Stomach Bitters was struggling into notice against the prejudice which everything new, however excellent, is doomed to encounter.

TO-DAY
It stands at the head of all the tonic and alterative preparations in existence. Its celebrity has spread many imitations but no rivals. The genuine is the ONLY SAFE STIMULANT that has ever been introduced into the sick chamber. In the Hospitals of the Army and Navy, the surgeons find it the very best tonic for convalescents and report it as invaluable for sustaining the vigor of troops on the march, as a remedy for scurvy and all scorbutic affections, and as the only specific for sea-sickness. California and Australia have emphatically endorsed it as the MINERAL MEDICINE par excellence, and in Spanish America and all the tropical climate, it is considered the only reliable antidote to epidemic fevers.

There is no mystery about the causes of its success. It is the only stomachic and alterative in which are combined the grand requisites of a mild, pure, and invigorating vegetable stimulant, with the finest selection of tonic, anti-bilious, anti-scorbutic, aperient, and depurative herbs, roots, plants and barks, that have ever been intermixed in a medicinal preparation.

The Bitters have this distinctive quality, which is not shared, it is believed, by any tonic, diuretic or extract in the world; they do not excite the pulse though they diffuse a wonderful degree of vigor into the nervous system, and strengthen and sustain the whole physical organization.

It is also proper to state that the Bitters are sold exclusively in glass, and never under any circumstances by the gallon or the barrel. Importers and imitators are abroad, and the only safeguard the public has against them is to see that the Bitters they buy bear the engraved label and note of hand of Messrs. Hostetter & Smith, and the government stamp over the cork of the bottle.

the public that they have this day formed a partnership, under the name of

WEYER & RENAULT,
For the purpose of giving a new impulse to this already favorably known establishment. For cleaning and renewing Blankets and Cloths this establishment has no rival, and this fact is readily ac-knowledgeed by a single trial. With the same success they have extended their special attention to cleaning and renewing Carpets, Rugs, Clothing, Flinnels, Dress Goods, Lace and Damask Curtains, etc., etc. The many improvements they have introduced justify them in saying that in the future the greatest regularity in their work will prevail, and the goods returned with all possible dispatch.
